Wayne Dalton Garage Doors Featured in ‘Garage Rehab’ Transformation

Abel Racing in Midwest City, OK receives complete overhaul to revive business

December 11, 2017 - Wayne Dalton commercial doors helped transform a struggling automotive shop this fall on Discovery Channel’s new series GARAGE REHAB, which follows American entrepreneur and Gas Monkey Garage owner Richard Rawlings as he travels the country to revive automotive garages on the brink of failure. With an original air date of October 25, the episode showcased how one Wayne Dalton Model 451 Full-View Aluminum door and four Model 2411 Sectional Steel garage doors assisted in the transformation of Abel Racing in Midwest City, OK.

“With our help, the GARAGE REHAB team was able to create a striking focal point of Abel Racing’s storefront. Not only does Model 451 perfectly align with the shops’ design aesthetic, but it provides a clear view of the classic cars inside, even when the doors are closed,” said Wayne Dalton Brand Manager Sarah Schram.

The commercial garage doors installed by Wayne Dalton dealer, DoorTec, are weather resistant and durable, ensuring fewer service calls and long-lasting performance. The Model 2411 garage doors feature an embossed exterior skin with a white stucco finish to enhance the door's appearance. To offer full visibility and an open look, the Model 451 garage door was designed with a clear anodized frame and clear glass.

GARAGE REHAB is produced for Discovery Channel by Pilgrim Media Group. For Pilgrim Media Group, executive producers are Craig Piligian and Eddie Rohwedder, with Rebecca Graham Forde serving as co-executive producer and Gretchen Morning serving as supervising producer. For Discovery Channel, executive producer is Craig Coffman and producer is Todd Lefkowitz. Richard Rawlings also serves as an executive producer.
