FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

WAYNE DALTON ADDS NEW COLOR FOR RESIDENTIAL DOORS New Options Now Available on Models 8300 and 8500

LEWISVILLE, TEXAS (September 14, 2015) – Wayne Dalton, a premier manufacturer of garage doors, is pleased to announce the addition of a new color, as well as expanded wood grain finish offerings to its Classic Steel Models 8300 and 8500.

Wayne Dalton dealers will have a new wood grain finish to offer their customers. Mission Oak, a medium-tone wood grain, is now available for Models 8300 and 8500 in the Sonoma panel design.

Wood grain finishes are also being expanded to Model 8500, Wayne Dalton's highest insulated residential garage door. Homeowners will now be able to choose Golden Oak, Mission Oak or Walnut wood grain finishes on both Models 8300 and 8500 in the Sonoma panel design.

"More consumers are in the market for a door that looks like real wood," said Sarah Schram, brand manager for Wayne Dalton. "Homeowners looking to make an impact on their home's curb appeal will be able to choose one of our realistic wood grain finishes on two of our most thermally efficient models."
